SATURDAY'S SECRET MEETING.

Writer on Railroad Topics and a Recognized Authority Explains That Big Railroads Will Not Suffer by the Recent Decision.

Chicago, March 29.—The most strenuous efforts are being made by the Central and Western roads to prevent the threatened rate war, but, as has been the case since the promulgation of the Supreme Court anti-pooling decision last Monday, every one is at sea. Two roads—the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the Union Pacific—have already openly cut passenger rates, and two others—the Missouri Pacific and Chicago & Great Western—have declared a reduction in certain classes of freight rates.

Besides these four roads, there is a suspicion abroad that one or two other lines are also in the rate-cutting business, but secretly. For instance, the competitors of the Erie are asking with considerable anxiety how it is that the Erie last week secured almost 100 per cent more boxed meat than they, the competitors, did. They are asking also how the Erie secured 17 per cent of the total freight of oats, of which there was shipped last week nearly as many tons as of all other grains combined. It is hinted that reduced rates explain the situation, but it has been impossible so far to verify that theory.

Wabash Gets Some Pickings.
Another fact which leads to a suspicion of rate cutting in another direction is that the Wabash carried last week nearly 30 per cent of the entire tonnage of oats. The reduction on oats is placed, according to an unverified rumor, at five cents per hundred, and that on meat and provisions at from eight to ten cents. It is possible that other roads have been securing similar advantages, but as yet none aside from the Wabash and Erie have fallen under suspicion.

Even in the event of a great rate war, it is asserted by those in a position to know, the farmer will secure no immediate benefit. Whatever saving on railway transportation there may be will fall into the pockets of the elevator men, for the reason that all of last season's grain has long since been contracted for and to-day lies in the elevators or cribs, ready for shipment, and subject to the absolute orders of the elevator owners. Should the war become general and prolonged into the coming season, however, the farmers will be afforded an opportunity for a much better contract price. This is considered hardly more than a remote contingency, however.

Minister Dupuy De Lome.

Some time ago Spain's representative at Washington denied that he still holds the same uncompromising views of America and Americans that he set forth years ago in his book "From Madrid to Madrid." It now appears that very recently, at his own home, he was indiscreet enough to make comments upon the statesmen and scholarship of this country that were anything but complimentary.

AT TARRYTOWN ELECTION.

Two Carpenters Opposed the Good Government Club Ticket and Bragged of It.

Two carpenters, named Smith and Remsen, who are employees of J. D. Purdy, a boss carpenter of Tarrytown, have alleged to the people of the village of North Tarrytown that they have a grievance against John D. Rockefeller. It is understood that they are about to enter suit against him for damages on the ground that he, through his representative, Superintendent Hutchinson, who has charge of his place at North Tarrytown, revenged himself upon them for not voting for the Good Government Club ticket in the charter election that was held a week ago.

There were two tickets in the field at that election, which was for the purpose of placing in office all the Village Trustees and other heads of governmental departments. The Good Government Club of

AMERICAN'S STRONG PROTEST.

Dr. Quinn's Refusal to Visit That House Again Aroused Spain's Representative to the Serious Blunder He Had Made.

The Spanish minister at Washington, Senor Dupuy De Lome, recently denied in the Journal that he now entertains the same sentiments toward America and Americans that he marked his views, as set forth in his book, "From Madrid to Madrid," published in the early seventeenth. That book he characterized as one chargeable to youth and inexperience.

But a gentleman lately very prominent in Cuban matters who made a short visit to Washington last week is regaling local club men with a story that seems to show that Senor De Lome may still be classed as an indiscreet diplomatist. It seems that the details of the occurrence have been commended on with much vigor in a limited circle of Washington's cosmopolitan circles for the past six weeks, but have only just been made public here.

Early last January, during the period of suspense following the introduction of the Cameron resolutions on Cuba, the Spanish Minister had a gathering of friends at his handsome residence on Connecticut avenue. There were present Dr. Emilio Dieckert, a professor of the University of Leipzig, on his way to Cuba on business for the German Government; Dr. Hermann Schoenfeldt, of the Columbian University, the well-known historian and German scholar, and Dr. Daniel Quinn, professor of Greek at the Catholic University, and the only American present.

The conversation and interchange of views lasted well into the night, the minister impressing on his guests the pleasure he experienced in being able to speak with an unreserved of a scholar to his compatriots. The drift soon was toward the American situation, and Senor De Lome reviewed the characters of Senators Cameron, Mills, Lodge, Chandler, Morgan, Vest, Daniel and others. Dr. Dieckert asked De Lome his opinion of American public men, and De Lome replied that "American public men are fools."

Married a Man With Another Wife.

MARGERY DEAN, who gained favor as an actress by her performance of the part of Willie Gray in Hoyt's "A Trip to Chinatown," has brought suit for annulment of her marriage and for $25,000 damages against Frank W. Brown, a wealthy stock broker of Washington. Margery Dean says: "I did not know that he was already married, and that his wife was living when I became Mrs. Frank W. Brown, at Washington, in 1894."

Mr. Brown is in China, but replies through his attorney: "I was suffering mentally when the ceremony occurred." He attributes his condition to intoxication. He is a prominent Washingtonian, and Margery Dean's attorney is confident that he will not appear at the trial of the case.

Put Jockey's Sheet Lead in His Pockets to Send Him to the Bottom.

With the same calm, cool courage which has made his family name a notable one through centuries of English history, young Archibald Campbell, "scion of all the Campbells," when final hope of future activity had left him, prepared yesterday to end his life.

His preparations were deliberate, careful, perfect, and so was the final act which closed the brief history of Archibald Campbell, son of Colonel C. C. Campbell, gentleman, Edith House, the Avenue, Eastbourne, England—and, coincidentally, that of "Archie," otherwise known as "Ohsauncy" Campbell, lightweight jockey, in the

NEED AT ONCE PROVEN.

DANGER TO THEIR FELLOWS.

PUPILS TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

One, Mindful of the Proprieties, Declines to Put Out Her Tongue at the Physician's Request.

With little warning 150 medical inspectors invaded the schools yesterday morning. The hour was 8:30, at which time most of the children were already in their seats, some trooping to their desks. The doctors were in search of bacilli, microbes and other disease germs, though the little ones did not know it. Some amusing mistakes, born of ignorance of the situation, were made, but the doctors experienced little difficulty.

In Public School No. 10, of which Miss Hester A. Roberts is principal, Dr. W. M. Reynolds made the inspection; in Public School No. 80, which is composed exclusively of colored children, Dr. James Williams, who is also colored, made the examination. At No. 10 Dr. Reynolds asked a little girl to put out her tongue, but the child refused and shook her head.

"Let me see your tongue," said the doctor, persistently.
But the little one planted her feet squarely on the floor and again shook her head.

A Matter of Training.

"Why don't you let me see your tongue?" inquired the wondering doctor.

"My mother told me not to make faces at anybody," the child finally said, with considerable emphasis, and it was only after much effort on the part of the doctor that the little one consented to display the tip of her tongue between her lips.

Dr. Williams said: "The general physical condition of every child will be determined, so that it may be placed on record for reference in times of disease and epidemic. Hearis, lungs, eyes and muscles will come in for critical tests, and the hereditary tendencies of the scholars will be carefully looked into, something that could not be attended to in the past owing to the inadequate facilities. If a child is found to be really ill from any cause, it will be given this card:

Dr. Blauvelt Says the Doctors Found More Than a Hundred Pupils Requiring Medical Treatment.

I am more than pleased, I am delighted, with the first day's work of the corps of physicians in the schools, and I am sure the new system will be productive of highly beneficial results to the community at large.

Just now, at the close of the first, which may be called the experimental stage of this innovation, I am unable to give conclusions, particularly totals of figures, derived from the reports of the 150 physicians who did their duties as inspectors in the schools to-day. That is because after the school had been inspected the inspector made out his report, enclosed it in an envelope and dropped it into the most convenient mail box.

Notwithstanding that method of delivery, about two-thirds of the reports had been received up to 8 o'clock to-night, and the remainder will undoubtedly arrive to-morrow morning, when the tables, which will not only be highly interesting but most important, will be given to the public.

Reports thus far received indicate that more than one hundred children in the primary grades of the schools have diseases that should require them to discontinue their studies, and undergo medical treatment in their homes. If not there, then they should have medicines from a dispensary.

Two or three cases of well defined diphtheria were brought to light by the inspectors, several of scarlet fever, mumps, whooping cough and measles. Then there were other cases of children who were not only afflicted with ringworm of the scalp, but many others who were uncleanly.

The importance of making these and other discoveries that are sure to follow the examinations, which will be made every school day in the year, cannot be overestimated. Quite a number of children were found to be afflicted with sore eyes, which in a short time might develop into acute ophthalmia. All such will, of course, be excluded, because of the danger of contamination and infection resulting from many children using the same towel on their hands and faces.

as facts which clearly proved them demagogues.
"It is not surprising," said De Lome, "that American laws and the execution of them are so ridiculous. They are made by incompetent ricksters and politicians and executed by their sycophants. It is only in a country like that that such slight men would be considered or gain distinction. It is useless for Europeans to try to understand them."
"Take, for example," he continued, "Mr. Mills's proposition made in all seriousness in the Senate: 'Let us go down and take Cuba,' and saying this with as much assurance as I would invite you to take a glass of wine. These demonstrations are to be similar to those which ten years ago reached their climax in the Haymarket tragedy; and the hanging of Spies and his comrades. It has been noticed that the A. V. O. There is a distinct tone in all leading articles advising a war against wealth. Capital and employers are denounced in the most outrageous language, and workmen are advised to prepare for revolution.
